NATIONAL & WORLD NEWS

◆ President Obama says he will veto the "cut, cap, and balance" plan proposed by Tea Party-backed House Republicans if it lands on his desk. The plan would allow the government to borrow an additional $2.4 trillion, but only after big and immediate spending cuts and the adoption by Congress of a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget.

◆ Gold climbed above the $1,600 level for the first time in history on Monday as investors continue to buy the precious metal amid uncertainty over Washington's ability to avoid a debt default. On Wall Street, the DJIA closed at 12,385.16; down 94.57 points.

◆ Dozens of Atlanta public school educators accused of cheating on standardized testing have until Wednesday to resign or be fired. A state report issued earlier this month identified 178 teachers and principals who cheated on the state testing in 2009 as a way to inflate student scores.

◆ A new study published in the journal Pediatrics says kids may be safest in cars when grandma or grandpa are driving instead of mom or dad. The researchers have a theory that grandparents are made more nervous about the task of driving with the "precious cargo" of their grandchildren and, as a result, practice more cautious driving habits to compensate for any age-related challenges.
