◆ McMINN CO. MAN DIES FROM BEE STINGS

Dr. Kelly Thomas, 40, of the Clearwater community died Sunday night after being stung in the back of the neck by a bee. Dr. Thomas was a lecturer and tuba/euphonium instructor for the University of Tennessee Music Department. He and his wife (the former Jana Simpson) and their children had recently moved from Arizona to the Clearwater community to be near his wife's family. While in Arizona, Dr. Thomas was a tuba/euphonium instructor and director of the pop band at the University of Arizona.

◆ WORKER KILLED AT RESOLUTE PLANT

A contractor working at Resolute Forest Products (formerly Bowater) in Calhoun has died from injuries received in an accident. The man, whose name has not been released, was an employee of Jake Marshall Mechanical Contractors from Chattanooga. He was working at the Kraft Mill facility, which is where pulp is produced, when the accident happened last Friday. Details of the accident have not been released.

NATIONAL & WORLD NEWS

◆ In order to combat cheating on high-stakes college entrance exams, a new weapon is being rolled out in Chinese schools at two testing centers in central China. A new contraption flying overhead is being employed to scan for any unusual signals being sent to devices such as answers to student smart phones. A student can be banned from re-taking the exam for up to three years if caught cheating and found guilty.

◆ After years of hard work, Fernando Rojas, a southern California teen is about to move across the country to attend college, and he'll have bragging rights to being a member of a very select group of freshmen. Rojas, who is 17 and a national speech and debate champion, was accepted to all eight Ivy League universities and has chosen Yale.
