◆ BEWARE OF CONTAMINATED FISH

The Tennessee Department of Environment and Conservation has released their Streams, Rivers, and Reservoirs advisories for the state. Several rivers and lakes in Southeast Tennessee made the list for contaminated fish. The Hiwassee River in McMinn, Meigs, and Bradley counties has high levels of mercury prompting a precautionary advisory for large mouth bass. Watts Bar Lake in Meigs, Rhea, Loudon, and Roane counties is contaminated by PCB's. A "do not eat" warning is in effect for catfish and striped bass from Watts Bar Lake. A precautionary advisory is in effect for white bass, sauger, carp, small-mouth buffalo, and large mouth bass. A precautionary advisory is in effect for catfish from the Tellico Reservoir in Loudon and Monroe counties. At greatest risk are people who eat contaminated fish for years, such as recreational or subsistence fishermen, children, and pregnant women. Eating an occasional fish from a contaminated lake or river will not measurably increase your cancer risk. However, you can reduce the risk by throwing back the big ones and eating only smaller fish, avoid fatty fish such as carp, buffalo, and catfish, wash the fish before cleaning, and broil or grill your fish instead of frying. Frying tends to seal the fat and contaminants into the food. It is very important that children not eat fish contaminated with mercury.

Remembering a Fallen Hero

A ceremony remembering Freddie Sherlin, a McMinn County man who was killed in Vietnam, was held this past Sunday at Cedar Grove Cemetery. Sherlin lost his life in Vietnam on August 8th, 1969. One of the men who was with Sherlin on the day of the attack, Company Commander Terry Holland, attended the ceremony. In the photo: (L-R) Rich Camiso, T.R.
