AUB Crews Assist with Power Restoration Following Winter Storm Fern

Athens Utilities Board (AUB) power crews are assisting with restoration efforts across Tennessee following Winter Storm Fern, which brought ice and severe winter weather that caused widespread power outages.

A seven-member AUB lineman crew departed Athens on Sunday, Jan. 25, to help restore power in the Rockwood area. The crew completed work there by Tuesday, Jan. 27, before moving on to Harriman to assist with additional restoration efforts. The crew returned to Athens late Thursday night.

AUB continues to provide mutual aid support. A second seven-member lineman crew was scheduled to depart for Nashville on Friday to assist Nashville Electric Service (NES). As of Friday, Jan. 30, approximately 112,608 homes and businesses—about 24.3 percent of NES customers—remained without power due to extensive damage caused by ice accumulation and severe weather across Middle Tennessee.

David St. John, superintendent of power for Athens Utilities Board, praised the efforts of AUB's linemen and the positive response from communities they assisted.

"I received a call from Larry Brackett in Rockwood letting me know how impressed he was with our linemen," St. John said. "He told me that out of all the crews he has worked around, our team stood out."

St. John also commended the teamwork and dedication of AUB's crews, noting their willingness to help other communities while facing challenging conditions.

Athens Utilities Board regularly participates in mutual aid efforts during major weather events while continuing to serve customers locally.
