VA Resource Fair to Support Athens-Area Veterans on July 23

The VA Tennessee Valley Healthcare System will host a community resource fair in Athens later this month, offering Veterans and their families direct access to programs, benefits, and enrollment services. The free event will take place Thursday, July 23, from 4–7 p.m., with remarks from VA leadership beginning at 5 p.m., at Keith Memorial United Methodist Church's Contemporary Worship Center, 600 W. Madison Ave., Athens.

The fair is designed to connect Veterans with key VA programs, including the PACT Act, Caregiver Support Program, Community Care Program, and other services that support health, wellness, and long-term care needs. Veterans will be able to enroll in VA health care on-site, explore available benefits, and meet directly with staff who can guide them through eligibility and application steps.

Representatives from the Tennessee Department of Veterans Services will also attend, offering help with state and federal benefits, claims questions, and additional support for Veterans and their caregivers.

The VA Tennessee Valley Healthcare System serves Veterans across Tennessee and Kentucky through two major medical centers—Alvin C. York VA Medical Center in Murfreesboro and the Nashville VA Medical Center—along with more than a dozen outpatient clinics. The system provides primary and specialty care, acute medicine and surgery, transplant services, spinal cord injury care, mental health services, and extended care programs.
